Applicants (with teacher recommendations) are required to undertake preparatory courses, submit an essay and attend an interview at the Academy. International Academy Another International Baccalaureate (IB) school, Michigan's International Academy focuses on English, the arts, humanities, education and a second language in addition to STEM subjects. Page 3 Display a triangle to the class, either by drawing it on the whiteboard or using an interactive whiteboard. Part of the day, I have students in my own classroom for math classes. Intermediate Have students think-pair-share what a corner and side are with an elbow partner. Being a special education teacher, the hats I wear are many. I love the unpredictable nature of middle schoolers: their humor, their wisdom, and their fresh take on life. The remainder of this time is spent planning for next week's lessons, completing special education paperwork, or talking to other teachers about students we share. A lot of what I do during the day is helping students with short and long-term goal setting, project management, and locating resources. But a gifted or talented identification might suffice. Thomas Jefferson High School for Science and Technology For any kid looking to excel in a STEM field, there's really no better high school in America, reports The Best Schools site. But if you've got a bright kid (or indeed you are one), they're well worth the effort to get in — even if it involves moving out of state. Staten Island Technical High School Granted 'Specialized High School' status by the NYC Department of Education, this school has a focus on technology. Working with special education students, I often find that by middle school, they have given up on themselves, certain they are "stupid." I have to find ways to individually motivate them, help them experience success, and bridge what they can do based upon where the curriculum expects them to be. Explain to the class that today they will learn how to describe the attributes, or characteristics, of a shape to describe it, instead of just using its name! Beginning Provide students with a set of flashcards that have pictures of shapes in the lesson on the front and the shape's names in English and their home language (L1) on the back. Next, ask students to find an object with two or more sides. Cossondra attended Northern Michigan University, where she earned a BS in Education, with minors in social studies and math, as well as an MA in Special Education, focusing on learning disabilities. Once you are behind, it is overwhelming and it becomes too much to conquer. As students learn content, they are also learning the tool. It sounds trite, but it is the only way you will survive. He lived there for five years and was also vice principal prior to taking a three-year temporary assignment as Coordinator of Education Technology for 35 remote schools. Days I do not have scheduled meetings are spent working on special education paperwork, grading papers, planning, making copies and more. After my last class of the day, I make sure my room is ready for the next day. Application requirements include an entrance exam, essay, recommendations and a history of academic achievement. I make sure my desk is relatively cleaned off, and I can easily locate any materials I need for the next day. What aspects of your job are the most challenging and how do you overcome them? Are they straight or curved? Students are also required to complete 80 hours of community service. Liberal Arts and Science Academy High School This Austin, Texas institution attracts some of the most advanced students from the local area. Lessons often require certain materials be set up in advance so I make sure everything is as ready as can be. It is a nice and casual, low-pressure time that goes a long way to creating community. After school is primarily family focused: puttering around the house, visiting, eating supper together, and reading or writing in the evening with time for school or committee work as needed. Be organized. Connect with him via Twitter @milesmac. Another hour of the day, I co-teach a language arts class. This time is a mix of trivia, catching-up, and professional sharing. Because I am responsible for all subjects and I have the same group of students for the entire day, we have tremendous flexibility over our day. So should you. Take time to understand motivations driving behaviors. Manage the workload: - formative assessment: write on kids' work as you circulate, only take it home if you have to. Here are the ones that best define my own beliefs and attitudes about teaching: Take what you have and get on with it. Everyone in the room is a learner, including yourself. Don't teach, help students discover. Your students have lives outside school. I arrive at school about 45 minutes before our contracted time, about an hour before students begin to arrive in the halls. I always write on the board hour-by-hour what the day's objectives are, as well as list the materials students need to bring to class on a smaller board in the hallway. Ask students to find a corner in the room. The top 10 high schools in the USA are some of the most exclusive. Take the time each day to complete your Must Do Today list. Finally, take time to reflect on your work, your lessons, your students and your own journey as a teacher, either in a blog or an old fashioned journal. Consider tech trouble part of the learning experience. That goes without saying. Instruct students to label the corners and sides of a couple objects in the room. Blur the line between teachers and learners and capitalize on the skills in the room. You don't need to be an expert with the technology. My strategy is "serial innovation" in which I see an idea, get excited, perform some initial research to implement, reflect, and understand the issues connected with the idea, then move on to the next one. Located in the eco-friendly city of Alexandria, Virginia, TJHSST covers a variety of topics, including artificial intelligence, quantum mechanics and marine biology. There are also plenty of clubs. I find that by making an effort to know my students as people, learning their interests outside school, and recognizing things they are good at, I can encourage them to push themselves to try new things. I don't know if it is best practice, but here are some thoughts: Don't expect tech to be perfect. I have recently re-enrolled in the GWU Ed Tech program so coursework will change the nature of my evenings and "me time." What aspects of your job are the most challenging and how do you overcome them? This hour I work with another teacher to provide instruction to a class comprised of both regular education students, as well as some of the students on my caseload. The only problem with that strategy is that I don't usually stick with the same thing long enough to develop mastery but I can be helpful to other teachers as they seek to innovate. What do you most enjoy about being a teacher? Applicants are selected by lottery. Stanton College Preparatory School B Institutions often appear among the top 10 schools in America, and for good reason too: They have to meet world-class standards. Looking around a busy room with kids interacting, exploring, learning, creating, engaging, questioning, is a thrill. We share the duties of instruction, some days she leads while I support; other days, I am the lead teacher, with her circulating, providing additional assistance to struggling students. The day races by in a blur of students and classes. When students begin to arrive, a crowd tends to congregate in my classroom, wanting to chat, get help with homework, or just hang out. Once the first warning bell rings, I make sure to be in the hall, greeting students as they enter and reminding them of materials they need. - summative assessment: use criteria, rubrics, and self-assessments, it focuses the feedback. (Thanks for this advice, MJ!) Get connected with educators online. I have three lists going all the time: #1 Must Do Today, #2 Must Do This Week, and #3 Dream List (things such as cleaning out desk drawer, organizing files, etc...) Also, don't ever get behind on grades and paperwork. From them, I have learned patience, endurance, tolerance, and humor. Discuss the shape attributes as a class. Count the sides of the triangle together. Other hours are academic support hours where students come to my room with assignments from other classes they need help on. The process of writing will help you clear your mind, formulate solutions to problems, and give you a running record of how far you've come. What do you know now that you wish you'd known during your first year of teaching? Some may just need a point in the right direction, others need a quiet place to finish independently, but most of these students need as near to one-on-one help as I can manage. Today she is a math, language arts, and resource room teacher for seventh through ninth grade students. After the temporary assignment was completed, he settled in Winnipeg, teaching fifth grade for three years in an elementary school. Page 4 Display a triangle to the class, either by drawing it on the whiteboard or using an interactive whiteboard. My day starts very early. There are so many cool and interesting things to do and try as a teacher but there isn't enough time to do it all. Explain that each side is a line that connects to two corners. During that period, Miles pursued a Master of Arts in Education and Human Development with a Concentration in Education Technology Leadership from George Washington University (GWU). I wish I had known that my students would so profoundly change me. Courses are project-based and collaborative, preparing students for academic or professional research positions. Collectively, in your classroom, you probably have all the technology knowledge you need to get things going. These hours are the most hectic, with up to 15 students, all of whom are often working on different assignments, with varied support needs. During our exchange, Cossondra described her average day in the classroom as well as what she knows today that she wishes she'd known as a beginning teacher. Please describe what your typical workday is like as an educator. Point to each corner on the triangle. I use this quiet time to prepare for my day, mentally as well as physically. Now, I realize they have much more to teach me than I will ever be able to give back in return. We thank Cossondra for sharing her varied experiences and heartfelt wisdom with us and wish her all the best with the rest of the school year. Ask your students to call out the name of the shape. I tend to eat lunch in my classroom and invite students to visit, continue their projects, or get assistance during the lunch break. It shares a campus with Rincon High School, where University High School students may attend extra classes. (I'm sure one of your curricula somewhere will have something about identifying needs, creating a strategy for locating, synthesizing, and applying information.) Teaching students how to learn is much more valuable. Can you share any words of wisdom with recent graduates who are preparing to start a teaching career? This resource includes 45 worksheet activities that build an understanding of literary devices and types of sentences. Read through the flashcards with the students orally prior to the lesson. They can search tutorials on how to use it and teach others when they find solutions. Because the rest of the day has work, family, and community commitments I get up between 4:30 and 5 AM for "Me Time." I sit at the living room window with the iPad and a cup of coffee and read my RSS feed, connect with my professional learning network on Twitter, my friends and family on Facebook, and write for my blog. This lends itself to fully integrated, project-based learning experiences where, apart from PE and Applied Arts programs, the designations on our timetable are arbitrary. Applicants are required to submit sketchbooks or portfolios and successfully complete an audition — regardless of their desired specialism. Gilbert Classical Academy Here's one 'academy' that upholds the original meaning of that word. The most challenging aspect of my job is motivating students. Interview with Miles MacFarlane, Winnipeg Eighth Grade Teacher We interviewed Miles MacFarlane, a middle school teacher in Winnipeg with 22 years' experience in the field of education. During her 20 years in the classroom, Cossondra has taught social studies, math, American history and technology to middle school students. But its varied curriculum also includes the arts and humanities, as well as sports. Going into my teaching career, I was focused on what I could teach my students. I especially enjoy the opportunity to have students for multiple school years, watching them learn, grow and mature. Can you share any time management advice for teachers striving to create a balanced professional and personal life? How many corners does a triangle have? Managing the online learning spaces (Edmodo and student blogs) occupies time throughout the day providing a context for discussions with students and becomes the student's portfolio. Its curriculum is rooted in the Socratic Method of teaching, emphasizing debate and critical thinking even (or especially) when it contradicts the teacher. There's also an emphasis on career training through shadowing and internships. Downingtown S.T.E.M. Academy STEM stands for science, technology, engineering and mathematics — the foci of this International Baccalaureate World School in Downingtown, Pennsylvania. Know what it should be able to do and use that understanding to spur creative thought in your students. Explain to the class that a corner is the place where two sides meet. Twitter and blogs are valuable sources of professional learning. If you can't find anything positive in a situation, you need to look harder. We thank Miles for setting aside time from his hectic day to share his valuable suggestions for new teachers. I love experimenting with technology myself and tossing a new tech tool/app into the mix with some visions of what it could do, then seeing students pick it up and run with it is exciting. What best practices can you share for integrating technology into classroom activities? — mark the hell out of the first couple of paragraphs then focus on content. This hour is when I schedule all parent meetings, Individual Education Plan Team meetings or other informal meetings. The included literary devices are alliteration, onomatopoeia, similes, hyperbole, imagery, metaphors, symbolism, and personification. While there is no such thing as a typical day for a teacher, some things are predictable. The students and I look at what projects and activities are in progress, look at deadlines and project goals, then set an agenda for the day. At any given time students could be working on different things in different places. We may divide the class into two sections, and take one group to another classroom for more direct instruction, or keep them all together. I do get one hour of "prep" time. Refreshingly, something like 40 percent of those enrolled come from disadvantaged backgrounds. At 6:30 AM, I get breakfast and lunches ready for my wife and nine-year-old son while listening to the morning news on the radio. Before school starts I like to spend time with colleagues in the staff room over the crossword. Great discussion questions include: How many sides does a triangle have? It is a constant uphill battle, with many backwards slides. What do you most enjoy about being a teacher?
